What's New In?

Q: Pointed set projective line in common sense My book says that a projective line over a field is a set of points such that  $x_1 + x_2 + x_3 = 0$  for every three points  $(x_1, x_2, x_3)$ . I have four questions about it: What is a projective line over a field? Is it just the set of points which form a plane in the projective space? Is the projective line over a field a subset of  $\mathbb{R}^3$ ? I mean "for every three points  $(x_1, x_2, x_3)$ " Do you use the subscripts of the points to indicate they are of the same first component as others, or is it just a special case? When you use two or more points to form a linear equivalence class as  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$ , do you use the subscripts to indicate which two points make up the class? (for example, if you only do  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$  without subscripts, does the  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$  mean  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$  for all possible first components, or just all first components that are 0?) If  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$ , is it correct to say that if  $\bar{x}_1$  and  $\bar{x}_2$  are on different sides of a line in  $\mathbb{P}^1$ , or inside/outside of a line? For example, if  $\bar{x}_1 = \bar{x}_2$ , are  $\bar{x}_1$  and  $\bar{x}_2$  both outside of the line  $l$  or both inside the line  $l$ ? A: A projective line is a set of points in a projective space such that the points correspond to lines in the projective plane. Your first question shows that there is a forgetful map that projects points in  $\mathbb{P}_k^1$  to points in  $\mathbb{P}_k^2$ , and you can think of  $\mathbb{P}_k^1$  as the set of points in  $\mathbb{P}_k^2$
