Q: Why does my javascript/canvas code give an empty array? I have written a javascript function, that simply looks to see if the screen has been touched. `var isScreenTouch = true; function checkTouches(){ if (typeof window.ontouch!=='undefined') { isScreenTouch = true; } else if (typeof touch!=='undefined') { isScreenTouch = false; } } if (isScreenTouch) { isScreenTouch = false; } } function pointToVect(event) { var x = event.pageX; var y = event.pageY; return { x: x, y: y }; } var rects = [];`
`window.addEventListener('DOMContentLoaded', function`

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a mobile terminal and a location-based guide method, and more particularly to a mobile terminal and a location-based guide method for guiding a user to a destination using a mobile terminal. 2. Description of the Related Art Mobile terminals are now being used for multimedia functions, not just for voice calls. For example, with development of the wireless internet (WiFi) technology and the like, mobile terminals have become capable of providing various services, such as multimedia services, by implementing various wireless internet services in a mobile communication network. Many individuals experience low energy levels after lunch because food is slowly absorbed into the stomach or digestive system. The ability to get a quick boost of energy depends on the rate of food digestion. When food is digested more quickly, energy levels rise. Food digested slowly is more concentrated in energy than quickly digested food. Eating twice a day can help users get a better balance of slow and quick digested food. These foods can boost energy levels: 1. Baked beans Baked beans are good for energy levels because they can keep you full for longer, and they are fairly low in calories. Most people consume baked beans as a dip for bread. A popular recipe is that of a baked bean and scotch egg, which is a dish with bread, baked beans, and hard boiled egg. To prepare a baked bean and scotch egg, you will need: 1 large can of baked beans (or a half a can) Salt and pepper Two hard boiled eggs Toast or bread Baked beans work well because they have lots of protein and are full of other important nutrients. 2. Vegetables Vegetables contain lots of fiber and vitamins and minerals, which are good for energy levels and help to clean out the system. Vegetables such as broccoli, spinach, peas, and carrots, are good foods that can help to boost energy. Vegetables are good sources of antioxidants, which help to promote good health. 3. Milk Milk is a good food for energy. There are two types of milk that are good for energy: skim milk and whole milk. Skim milk contains a lot of protein, which is good for energy. For lunch, you can have a bowl of skim milk with a slice of toast. Other milk alternatives such
