In addition to gameplay improvements, a new "soccer IQ" system introduced in FIFA 21 will be further developed in FIFA 22. This system measures a player's tactical awareness, decision-making and creativity by tracking pass success rates, goal returns and shots on goal over their career. The global soccer IQ leaderboard will be expanded to include all clubs.

"This year, we wanted to put effort into further enhancing the authenticity of our authentic play," said Jeff Huot, Executive Vice President, EA SPORTS™ FIFA. "By using technology to accurately simulate real-life player movement and their interactions with other players, ball and environment, we can deliver authentic football. We hope fans will find our FIFA 22 game and our new features the best-ever FIFA experience." "FIFA Ultimate Team" continues to be one of the most popular modes in our game, with players continuing to grow deeper into their digital stables of footballers. As the primary way for players to practice their real-life game with an online community, FIFA Ultimate Team plays a critical role in our expansion of gameplay to rival real-life soccer. FIFA 22 will release in Fall 2017 on PS4, Xbox One, Nintendo Switch, and PC.

Vendors struggling to get into the business of online music (AP) EMI and other major companies want to make it easier for people to buy music legally without a computer. They're setting up online record stores, giving away free music, and setting up online music stores. But it's been tough for some of them to take off. Music companies' losses are mounting as record companies aim for higher profit margins online. And the retailers are losing money, though not as much as anticipated. "There are some extremely smart people working for the labels who are generally held in high regard when it comes to business, but when it comes to our industry they're not that good," said Craig Lurie, a former senior executive at MusicNet, an online music company that was sold last year. "The problem is EMI and the labels have not gotten very good at this. They don't understand customer behavior." EMI, the world's largest music label, is rolling out a music business that includes an online store called MusicNet. EMI started MusicNet in 2007 as a joint venture with Kazaa Networks, a German music file sharing company. MusicNet
