Format: PDF / ePub / Mobi / Kindle / RTF / Text / 3GPP / XHTML In this post:.CBF4 (encoded by the gene PHO2) delays entrance into the stationary phase and is required for biofilm formation of Saccharomyces cerevisiae. CBF4 gene encodes a transcriptional regulator in yeast cells. By means of synthetic genetic array screening, we found that the deletion of CBF4 led to a number of phenotypes including delayed entrance into the stationary phase of growth. In addition, we found that many biofilm-related genes were downregulated in the $\Delta cbf4$ mutant. Consistent with these observations, the ability to form biofilms was reduced in the $\Delta cbf4$ mutant. Moreover, the expression of RIM101 was upregulated in the $\Delta cbf4$ mutant. RIM101 encodes a Rho1p guanine nucleotide exchange factor, and its overexpression causes cells to form much more biofilms than wild-type cells. Interestingly, the deletion of CBF4 reduced the expression of PDR1, encoding a multidrug resistance pump required for biofilm formation. Finally, we confirmed that the expression of PHO2, which is located in the same operon as PHO4, was substantially downregulated in the $\Delta cbf4$ mutant. Taken together, our results suggest that CBF4 plays an important role in both the entrance into the stationary phase and in the formation of biofilms in yeast cells. We have created a new peer review process for all journal assignments to speed this along. Today, I am sending out a memo about this. To be clear, we are sending this out so that it gets to everyone. We will continue to review all assignments and communicate after the peer review, not in addition to, the peer review process. Also of note, there are no more journal assignments until we communicate that
